If a document was prepared and several copies were made or if additional copies were thereafter made and any such copy is no longer identical by reason of subsequent notation or modification of any kind whatsoever, including, without limitation, notations on the front or back of the pages thereof, then such non-identical copy is a separate document and must be produced. Any document shall include all exhibits, schedules or other writings affected by or referenced in any such document or other writings necessary to complete the information contained therein or make it not misleading;

- b. Copies of such documents on which appear any initialing, notation, or handwriting of any kind not appearing on the original;

If the specific document elicited a response, that response is also to be identified and produced. If the document was itself a response, the document to which it responded is also to be identified and produced.
4. "Person" shall mean any natural person, association, joint venture, partnership, subsidiary, corporation, or other legal or business entity.
5. "Related to" and "relating to" shall mean connected in some way; having a relationship to or with something else. See Black's Law Dictionary (10th ed. 2014). This term encompasses (as is used in its common meaning, adopted above) things that refer to, discuss, describe, concern, reflect, constitute, contain, comprise, identify, or in any way to pertain to, in whole or in part, or otherwise to be used, considered, or reviewed in any way in connection with, the specified subject. Thus, documents that “relate to” a subject also include those which were specifically rejected and those which were not relied or acted upon.

2. The word “and” and the word “or” shall be read conjunctively unless specifically indicated by the definition, instruction, or request. The word “any” shall not be interpreted to limit the number of documents responsive to a request.
